LUNAR TICS [DVD]

'Lunar Tics' has been written and produced by Iain Ewing, Steve Pratt and Brian Vining, and directed by Brian Vining.

The Lunar Tics are moon-based creatures who are sent on a school excursion to discover new and exciting things on Earth's largest island, Australia. While supervised by Mister Dot, their School teacher, the Lunar Tics pull together and work as a team to gain knowledge during this delightful adventure. They show their enthusiasm and excitement for learning by breaking out in spontaneous song.

So join Fran, Rus and Tac as they show you Earth while in search of the Platypus.

About Steve Pratt:

As a passionate guitarist beginning his BA in Film and Television at the Griffith University (1985), Steve Pratt began his musical career by writing sound scores for his own short films as well as those of students he was studying with. He has since played in a number of bands over the last twenty years and has continued to develop a variety of diverse independent and corporate musical projects. Among these have been: a soundtrack for the feature length documentary "Win or Lose" on Fox Sports, as well as soundtracks for a number of TV and Radio commercials.

His passion for complimenting visuals with music comes naturally considering the number of awards he won in Film for his cinematography and directing. Steve's talents also developed as a professional screenwriter and producer in film and TV. He then co-wrote the script and co-produced the video project "Lunar Tics (Find The Platypus)". Steve and his co-producers felt inspired to create a video that was educational and entertaining for children in the 3-7 year age group. Steve also wrote the music and lyrics, and recorded all seven songs for the video.
